Might need some lesson... #likebabylikemomma Sometimes the thing I get the most excited about is sweatpants. All day long... #preggolife #nothingnfitsright Glucose testing day! 11 weeks until brother!	Surrounding posts providing context
Hilo, HI on the big island. Amazing landscape!! Miguel in Hawaii Room with a view, the views were magnificent! Zip lining, so fun!! Talk about fun!! Something I thought I would never do, now I may have to get certified!!	Single post describing a continuous life event
John came home from the hospital last night. Thank you so much for your prayers, love and support. He has 6 weeks of IV antibiotics but at least he gets to do that at home...

Table A3. A codebook to label intimacy of life events on a Three-point Likert scale.

Degree of Intimacy	Description
Low	Events which are typically discloseable to a public audience, smaller events as a part of normal lives, posts which are common to be post about on social media, e.g., Work and academic success, social activities, family meetups, celebratory post about family, friends, significant other, event that is not too specific, and several others may be undergoing at the same time (e.g., back to school, change of quarter related events), promoting business
Medium	Big life event that is typically shared on social media. (e.g. new baby, new job). Includes negative events that are common to post about (death of family member, injury). Large purchases such as a house, ca. Important part of personal life, but not too personal to share (would be fine telling someone they just met about)
High	Traumatic or events associated with some form of stigma. Sharing negative parts of life. Disclosing events about which someone might feel embarrassed about. Posts that may not make one look “perfect” if disclosed publicly. Finances— considered unusual (sometimes rude) to talk about money (at least in America)

Table A4. A codebook to label scope (degree of directness on the individual) of life events on a Three-point Likert scale.

Degree of Scope	Description
Low	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • They are removed from the event, e.g., describing something in surroundings (e.g. weather event, how nice their workplace is). • Promotional— want to reach as many people as possible. • Big event, not intimate/will interact with strangers, e.g., sports event. • Unlikely to explicitly state this, may be a vague post (talking about being unable to have kids anymore, hot flashes, etc).
Medium	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Both the poster and family, friends, and/or significant other are involved in/were impacted by the event. • Event is happening to someone close to them, but the poster is not part of that event, e.g., School-related posts typically parents talking about children. • Events such as buying a house, moving, etc which also involve their family. • Post about pets often mention family (or consider pet as family)
High	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Event is unique to the poster— it only happened to them • Or, significantly impacted them more than others, • Examples include promotion, met with an accident themselves, diagnosis about some condition of their own.

Table A5. A codebook to label temporal status of life events on binary values of ongoing and ended.

Status	Description
Ongoing	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Events that are still going on, or the individual talks about something that is happening in the present. • Part of an continuous or long-term process (e.g. pregnancy-related, planning upcoming wedding, health problems) • May use past tense— but still ongoing if the overall event has not ended. • If they're using past tense, but posting about an event that just happened.
Ended	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Events that recently ended, or ended in the past and the individual is mentioning about the occurrence. • The individual reflects on an event that happened a while ago, but still affects them (e.g. death of a parent). • The part of a continuous event which just ended (e.g. got back from vacation recently).
